RUSSIA CLAIMING PREFERENCE RIGHTS

Chinese Agreed to Consult Her Before Letting Foreign Contracts

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)
PEKING, Oct. 19.—Altho Russia has protested against the proposed railway from Fengcheng in Shansi province to Lanchow in Kansu province, and Japan has protested against the contract for the reconstruction of Grand canal in Shantung province, both of which improvements the American International corporation is about to finance, the American legation is confident of its position with reference to these two projects and is giving the Chinese foreign office hearty support in resisting the efforts of Russia and Japan to defeat these two improvements.

Russia's objection to the proposed railway in north China is based partly on conversations with former Chinese officials and partly on a letter written by the Chinese foreign office in 1899 assuring the Russian government that China would give Russia preference in the construction of railways extending northward towards Russian territory. The proposed railway connecting the Manchurian railway with Peking, and explained the difficulty felt by the Chinese government in according to the proposal. But we stated clearly that no other government would be allowed to construct such a railway.

"We now wish to reiterate in the plainest terms that China agrees that if railways are in future built from Peking to the north or to the northeast towards the Russian border, China reserves the right to construct such roads with Chinese capital and under Chinese supervision, but if it is proposed to have such construction undertaken by any other nation, the proposal shall be first made to the Russian government or to a Russian syndicate to construct the railway, and on no consideration will any other government or syndicate or any other nationality be allowed to be allowed to construct the railway."

In replying to this letter, the Russian government made a very broad interpretation of the terms. Instead of making them read "from Peking to the north or to the northeast toward the Russian border," the letter added in effect "or any other direction." Now it is the contention of the Russian government that the failure of the Chinese foreign office to protest against this reply when it was received twenty days after the original letter was an admission that China conceded blanket rights to Russia on railroad building out of Peking.

This contention is looked upon by most foreigners in Peking as absurd, and the Chinese have little thought of heeding a protest based on such ground. Japan's protest against American construction of the Grand canal in Shantung province is based on the claim that Japan now stands exactly where Germany did before the war with reference to Shantung province development. In the treaty concluded between China and Germany, in which China granted Germany the Kiao Chow concession and special rights in Shantung province, there was a clause which is as follows: "If at any time the Chinese should form schemes for the development of Shantung province, for the execution of which it is necessary to obtain foreign capital, the Chinese government, or whatever Chinese may be interested in such schemes, shall, in the first instance, apply to German capitalists."

It is the contention of the Japanese that as successors to the rights of Germans in Shantung province, they should be consulted first regarding the Grand canal conservancy loan. They prefer to call their inquiries concerning this loan merely inquiries rather than a protest, but insist they must have a full explanation in order to protect their rights in Shantung province.

China holds that under the treaty concluded between China and Japan in 1915, settling the much-discussed twenty-one demands, China agreed to recognize whatever rights Japan may acquire from Germany as the result of the present war, but the Chinese insist that Japan's rights in Shantung province have not yet been determined and cannot be determined until peace shall have been concluded in the present European war.

A CONGRESSWOMAN HAS TRIALS.

Proposals, "Ad" and Movie Men Resel Miss Rankin of Montana.

MISSOULA, Mont., Nov. 25.—Pursued by offers of marriage, advertising agencies wanting her pictures, cranks and beggars, Miss Jeannette Rankin, Montana's new congresswoman, took refuge today behind locked doors and stationed her brother, a former Harvard university football player, at the front gate to meet visitors.

Every mail brings a fresh crop of proposals, it was learned today. They come from all over the United States. One man, a lawyer from Oklahoma, "temporarily employed picking cotton," said he loved Miss Rankin from the moment he heard she could make her own hats.

A tooth paste company wanted to photograph Miss Rankin's teeth. It is willing to pay $5,000 for the picture. An automobile concern asked the privilege of presenting a new model car to Miss Rankin if she would merely consent to having her ownership used for advertising purposes. The latest excitement is a motion picture sharpshooter from California, who has dug himself in near the Rankin home with preparations for remaining all winter.

BUY WAMPUM GIVEN TO PENN

New York Museum Gets Historic Curios Dating From 1682 and 1683.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Purchase of two treaty belts of wampum given by Indians to William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, was announced today by the museum of the American Indian Heye foundation. The belts, according to information received by the museum, were presented to Penn on the occasion of the making of the famous Elm treaty and purchases of land from the Indians at Shackamaxon in 1682 and 1683. It is claimed that by the giving of these belts the Indians "pledged themselves to live in love with William Penn and his children so long as the sun and moon shall endure."
